

It is my understanding that the FCC is currently proposing to give LPFM stations priority over current FM translator services. I feel this would be a huge detriment to my local community. Ramona, CA is a rural town; it is difficult to get any radio transmissions at times. I am able to get KLOVE, the radio station I listen to 24/7. KLOVE is the only Christian based radio station I am able to receive on my FM station of 100.1. I would be devastated if it were to be displaced. I don't have to worry about the quality of songs that the station plays and I don't have to worry what my children hear while they are listening to the radio. This station has opened up a new world of music for my children and I. As a parent, it is refreshing to hear my children request KLOVE and to hear them sing with the songs they recognize.

It's crucial that radio stations like KLOVE be allowed to continue to broadcast. I don't have the option of receiving any other Christian based information/music except through my local radio station; alternate music such as provided through KLOVE can only be accessed through dishes in my area and quite frankly, I can't afford that. The service provided by KLOVE benefits communities everywhere, especially my own. It's refreshing to go into establishments in town and hear KLOVE playing there (my hair salon and a sandwich shop in town regularly listen to KLOVE). Removing the FM translator service would take away my choice to listen to the type of radio station I prefer. I don't think expanding LPFM stations to take priority over FM translators would benefit me; this station exists because its listening community already supports it. We support the station financially to keep it on the air and due to continued public support, KLOVE has been existence for around 25 years. We have made the commitment to keep this station on the air; please don't limit or diminish our ability to listen to KLOVE by allowing LPFM stations priority over FM services.
